The Preferential Primary

Arkansas' voters will go to the polls Tuesday in the first state-wide preferential primary election. Preferential primaries have been held for many years in some countries, but this is the first one in the state at large. The state had a brief experiment with a double-primary several years back — but this year's preferential primary is a different arrangement.

50-Gallon Still Is Captured Friday

Fred Aaron and Kelly Mayton Are Jailed Here

Deputy Sheriff Tom Middlebrooks announced Saturday the arrest of Fred Aaron and Kelly Mayton and the capture of a 50 gallon still Friday about 8 miles south of Spring Hill. Aaron and Mayton arrested at the still are being held in jail here, two other men escaped.

Officers had been watching the still for the past two days. It was fired an already to run. Six barrels of mash were also seized. Assisting Deputy Middlebrooks in making the arrest were officers Frank Turner and State Policeman Harold Porterfield.

Mr. Middlebrooks stated that most of the arrests for making illegal liquor came through the aid of citizens of the county and he urged that anyone knowing the whereabouts of a still to get in touch with the sheriff or state police immediately.

CRANIUM CRACKERS

Automotive Terms

The days when the average motorist had to stop every 50 miles or so to peer around under the hood of his car have passed, but you should still know some of the more common parts of the automobile. Here are five multiple choice questions to test your knowledge:

1. The purpose of the muffler is (a) to silence back-seat drivers; (b) to quiet the explosions in the motor; (c) to keep the motor warm; (d) to keep the horn from blowing too loudly.

2. The distributor's function is (a) to distribute electric current to the spark plugs; (b) to distribute oil to all parts of the car; (c) to keep the car evenly loaded; (d) to carry gasoline to the cylinders.

3. The function of the radiator is (a) to keep the interior of the car warm; (b) to catch bugs; (c) to cool the water which circulates in the motor; (d) to enhance the appearance of the front of the auto.

4. The pistons (a) enable the car to turn more easily; (b) keep water out of gasoline; (c) receive the shock of explosions in the motor; (d) keep carbon monoxide out of the car's interior.

5. The crankshaft is (a) the device used to turn over the motor if the starter fails; (b) a stick carried by traffic cops; (c) the rod on which the steering wheel is mounted; (d) a rod which receives the shock of the explosions from the pistons and transfers it into rotative motion.

Election Party at The Star Will Begin at 8 p. m. Tuesday

As in other years Hope Star will hold an all-night ELECTION PARTY in front of the newspaper office on South Walnut street beginning at 8 o'clock Tuesday night, August 13.

Complete election returns will be thrown on a big screen in front of the newspaper building, the projector and screen being furnished by the Saenger & Rialto theaters; and the running story of the election will be broadcast over the public address system of W. A. J. Mills, which is to be set up in the newspaper office.

The full ELECTION WIRE of the Associated Press will run from 8 o'clock Tuesday night until 3 in the morning, bringing in the governor's and all other state races from every county in the state.

A special tabulation will be made of the 11 counties of the Seventh Congressional district.

Complete returns will be given on all local races.

Co-operation of election officials in all Hempstead precincts is asked, as in other years. Each precinct should have an official telephone HOPE 768 COLLECT the complete tabulation as soon as the precinct is counted.

WE'LL BE SEEING YOU TUESDAY.

Roosevelt Views Naval Defenses

Starts Inspection at Portsmouth Navy Yard

PORTSMOUTH, N. H.—(P)—President Roosevelt began a week-end inspection of the New England sea and land defenses Saturday by observing conditions of the Portsmouth navy yard where five submarines costing $27,500,000 are being built and plans for several others are being drafted.

Hempstead Rally in Hope Monday to End Campaign

Speaking Place Uncertain, Probably at City Hall

BALLOTING PLACES

Here Is Copy of Official Hempstead County Ballot

Hempstead county's political stump tour will close here Monday, after two weeks travel to different towns and communities in the county, with an all-day rally, probably at city hall. The speaking place, however, has not been definitely decided on as yet.

The Democratic Central Committee met at the city hall Friday morning and selected all election officials for the county precincts.

Monday's rally here will be the last opportunity for Hope and Hempstead voters to hear the 1940 candidates speak.

Hope voters will cast their ballots at the following precincts:

Ward 1-B—Arkansas Bank & Trust Co. Bldg.

Ward 1-B—Young Chevrolet Co.

Streamlined Makeup for Star Monday; Copy Must Be Early

Beginning with the city edition Monday afternoon (Tuesday morning on the mail) Hope Star will appear in the newest streamlined typographical dress.

Mechanical changes — the most important in the 11½ years of this ownership — were completed Saturday and the switch-over will be made Monday, presenting a brand new newspaper.

Political candidates expecting to place last-minute announcements in Monday's edition, for the primary election Tuesday, are hereby given notice that insertion can not be guaranteed unless "copy" is in the office ready for the composing room by 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Copy submitted after that will be accepted only if the composing room is able to set it up in time to catch the Monday afternoon busses.

Mrs. Caraway to Vote for Adkins

Senior U. S. Senator Enters Gubernatorial Race

LITTLE ROCK — Homer M. Adkins, supported by a statement by United States Senator Hattie W. Caraway that she had "come home to vote for Homer," brought his campaign for governor to Little Rock Friday night before an audience of friends that overflowed the Auditorium.

A steady rain during the day and part of the night forced the transfer of the state rally indoors from the City Park.

The senior senator from Arkansas entered the Auditorium while Bacon Fulkerson, president of the Young Peoples Adkins-for-Governor Club, was speaking. The throng arose and cheered when Chairman John P. Vesey of Hope introduced her as the "champion of the common people."

"I have come home to vote," she said, "and I am taking advantage of this brief visit to attend this great meeting in behalf of Homer. The charge may be made that I am trying to tell you how to vote in the campaign. I am not doing this."

"I have a right to express my preference and I am not attempting to tell you how to vote, but I am

Bailey Is Second in State History to Seek 3rd Term

Duel With Homer M. Adkins Holds the Spotlight

STORY OF 2 MEN

Governorship, and Possibly Senate Seat, at Stake

LITTLE ROCK —(P)—Gov. Carl E. Bailey, seeking to become the second man in Arkansas' 100-year history to be elected to a third term as governor, will find three-way opposition in the first Democratic primary Tuesday.

Most active in opposition to the 45-year old chief executive has been Homer M. Adkins, 49-year-old former U. S. internal revenue collector for Arkansas. Other gubernatorial candidates are J. Rosser Venable, 51-year old Little Rock World war veteran, and Frank B. Witte, former state revenue department employee.

Bailey, former prosecuting attorney and attorney general, has met, but one political defeat—that of U. S. Senator John E. Miller—since he won his first elective office as Pulaski county prosecuting attorney in 1930.

Senate in View

Senator Miller defeated Bailey in a 1937 special election for the unexpired term of the late Senator Joe T. Robinson. Bailey, in a state-wide rally of his supporters here last Sunday, said indirectly he might oppose Miller in 1942 when the latter comes up for reelection.

Bailey stated in his opening announcement and in subsequent campaign talks he wanted to complete social and economic programs started during his administration, particularly the $140,000,000 highway bond refunding act, being held in abeyance pending a vote of the people in the November general election.

Bailey has been successively a railroad brakeman, county school teacher, lumber company auditor, lawyer, prosecuting attorney, attorney general and governor.

He conducted what was termed "a colorful campaign" when he was first nominated in the summer of 1936 and each of his campaign efforts against R. A. Cook, formerly Pulaski county judge and sheriff, in 1938, and Adkins, Venable and Witte, this summer have been marked with much of that same color.

Currently, Bailey seeks to duplicate the feat of Jeff Davis, who was elected governor in 1900 and returned to office in 1902 and 1904.

Adkins was appointed internal revenue collector by President Roosevelt on the joint recommendation of Senator Joe T. Robinson and Senator Hattie W. Caraway in 1933 and served continuously until his resignation in May to bid for the Governorship. He previously served two terms as Pulaski county sheriff and collector and as a member of the Little Rock city council.

Like Bailey, Adkins is possessed of unfagging physical energy. Six feet tall and weighing 165 pounds, he finds his recreation in horse-back riding and hunting.

A native of Jacksonville, Pulaski county, Adkins served as a bookkeeper, pharmacist and building material specialist before entering politics as a candidate for Pulaski county sheriff in 1922.

He served overseas with the United States forces during the World war and returned to this country with the rank of captain.

Until the past two weeks, Adkins waged an informal type of campaign, with little speech-making and much hand-shaking and conferences with supporters over the state. During the past two weeks, however, he has been making daily talks in behalf of his Venable previously has been a candidate for U. S. Senator and Governor. He won several decorations for heroic action with the Allied forces during the World war in France. He has campaigned informally, traveling about the state to meet supporters.

Witte, a Magnolia, Mo. man, was an investigator for the State Revenue Department during the administration of former Gov. J. Marion Futrell. He has limited his campaign largely to advertising mediums.

The League Comes Home

All things turn at the last, they say, to the place whence they sprung. The traveler of the world comes home to die and be buried in the churchyard of the village where he was born; the aged, stumbling, old man returns to childhood things.

So there comes now to Fine Hall, on the quiet campus of Princeton University, the last sad, battered remains of the League of Nations. The hope of keeping together some of its economic, financial and other non-political departments still flutters feebly, and so space will be made for them on the campus where Woodrow Wilson once walked and dreamed of a better world.

There is something appropriate about that. We do not know for certain, but it seems likely that Wilson, while a university president was also a deep student of government, meditated on a better and more orderly world as he strode the shady paths of Princeton. He did not know then that his was to be the leading role in trying to bring that ideal into actual being. But at Princeton the mind and thought was already forming which was later to offer to an eager world 14 points of a war settlement, the last of which was:

"A general association of nations must be formed under specific covenants for the purpose of affording mutual guarantees of political independence and territorial integrity to great and small states alike."

It was not to be. This is no time and no place to weep for the League, nor for the bruised and all-but-dead remains of it which now come creeping home for sanctuary on the Princeton campus.

It seems mockery to talk now, as Wilson talked then, of "the principle of justice to all peoples and nationalities, and their right to live on equal terms of liberty and safety with one another, whether they be strong or weak."

Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Norway, Finland, Luxembourg, Holland, Belgium, Lithuania, Latvia, France, Estonia, Bessarabia, all these cry out too loudly today for us to hear those other prophetic words, "No peace can last, or ought to last, or ought to last, which does not recognize and accept the principle that governments derive all their just powers from the consent of the governed; and that no right anywhere exists to hand peoples about from sovereignty to sovereignty as if they were property."

The League failed. The return to Princeton is scarcely more than a distant burial.

But can the world afford to forget the better world order which it was vainly designed to assure?

'Raincoats' Will Protect Apples;
Kitch en'ToolTAOINSHIRDLU
'Kitchen Tool Sliced Bread'

In this age of ersatz, it is no longer surprising to find substitutions in the manner of packaging foods, and in the foods themselves, emerging from secluded laboratories of the wizards of the experiment world.

Apples, for instance, will soon be appearing in raincoats. Packing firms have found a way to wrap them in pili-film, the thin transparent rubber covering. The tempting color of the apples shows through the package, and there is also opportunity to trademark the product.

Pickles, coffee, candies, nuts and cheese also will be encased in pili-film, as will soups and fruit juices if experiments work out. Sacks of this substance mean a saving of 40 per cent in weight, a big cut in freight costs.

The Fruitarian gives the consumer the opportunity of eating his food and also the container it came in. Designed to hold mar-malade, or honey-orange jelly, the fruitarian is made of compressed citrus fruit. Delicious as its contents, the container may be cut into strips and served as candy for variety.

Dairy products made out of coal are said to be on the German Nazi ersatz list. Because of the food shortage, Germany has been making intensive studies of the process of producing fats by molecular action.

Artificial egg white is another in the long list of products derived whose parent is that amazing plant, the soy bean. Developed by two women scientists at the University of California, the synthetic product costs less than real egg white and keeps better.

Concentrated extract now being made from tea leaves would be a boon to British soldiers with crowded knapsacks. Available over here, a tiny bit of the powder makes a steaming cup of tea when dropped in hot water. Vitamin-charged water is the latest

Mr. and Mrs. Carter Johnson

Entertain Emission Club

On Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Carter Johnson invited the members of the Emission Club to their attractive home on East Second street for their weekly bridge games.

Two tables were arranged for the players in the reception rooms where colorful summer flowers were noted at every point of vantage.

The guests were served delicious refreshments after several exciting bridge games. Mr. and Mrs. E. M. McWilliams and Mrs. Ralph Routon were guests other than the members of the club.

Mrs. Roy Allison Is Tuesday

Bridge Club Hostess

Mrs. Roy Allison entertained the members of the Tuesday bridge club on Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Kelly Bryant.

Brilliant summer flowers in attractive containers added to the beauty of the rooms where two tables were arranged for the club members and a few guests.

Scores were counted after the interesting games and the high score prize was awarded to Mrs. Bryant for the members and Mrs. Florence Sutton received the high score prize for the guests.

At the conclusion of the games, the hostess served delicious ice cream and cake to the club members and the following guests: Mrs. Billy Bob Henderson, Mrs. Cecil Wyatt, and Mrs. Florence Sutton.

Birthday Party for Robert Simpson

Mrs. S. H. Simpson entertained a number of children at her home on West Fourth street Wednesday afternoon in honor of her son, Master Robert Simpson, who was celebrating his tenth birthday. A number of games were played by the guests, who presented the young host with a number of attractive gifts.

Those present were: Margie Nell and Charlotte Wilson, Effie Charles, and Bobby Hyatt, Charles Thomas, Pansy and Ann Barnes, Sonny Vineyard, Wanda Dell Lawson, Norma Sue and Jimmy Livingston, Joan Card, Mary Crow, Frances, Betty, and James Thomas, Berenice, Betty Joe Collins, Floyd and Fannie Sue Steel, L. D. Springer Jr., and Alice Sue Simpson. Delicious cream and cake was served to the young guests.

Honolulu's Gay Colors Brighten Hollywood

By LUCIE NEVILLE

NEA Service Staff Correspondent. HOLLYWOOD—With Honolulu the pet vacation spot this year, Hollywood is getting some new ideas for colorful hot weather clothes. Recently back from the islands are Bette Davis, Sonja Henie, Irene Dunne and Andrea Leeds—who made a great hit by writing a pleasant little note to every fan after she got back. Sonja had a time for herself before her recent marriage, shopping around the islands for unusual prints for her trousseau.

All the stars took scanty wardrobes, came back with trunks crammed with native yard goods, which they're boasting you won't find duplicated here.

Stars Like American Models

You will, though, before the summer's over, in silk and cotton copies of the bright colors and splashy prints of flowers, palm trees and hula dancers. And, designing your own clothes, you'll be as fashion-wise as the stars, because they admit that the ready-made island clothes don't fit as flatteringly as do ones manufactured on the mainland.

Sonja Henie brought back some bathing suits, but mostly yardage for every kind of outfit from play suits to dinner dresses. Favorite of the lot she had made up is a full-skirted dinner dress of bright red and blue on a mustard yellow ground; its top is a simply-cut white crepe, with two pouch pockets attached to the belt in front.

Another, in a butterfly and hibiscus print on a pottery blue background, is made as simply, with self-

belt and short sleeves.

A cobalt blue silk, with hula dancer and beach-boy figures printed in brown, white and green, she had made into one-piece, zipper-fastened pajamas. A similar pattern, with palm trees, clouds and surf-riders scattered over a sky-blue silk, was used for a four-piece play outfit of shorts, skirt, turban and tied-in-front bolero. With the bright-colored dinner frocks she plans to wear red or white slippers. No special native jewelry of seeds or shells, though—diamonds are good enough for anything, says Miss Henie.

Bette Davis wore her Honolulu costume to her premiere of "All This and Heaven Too," and handled its ruffled train with dexterity. It was a copy, in white organdy, of a real "holoku"—took about 12 yards, she said, and it's a dinger to press, but worth it.

She's going to have more made in other materials, probably the soft silks such as the native ones use; they won't be too formal to wear as hostess gowns if there's a dinner or supper party later.

Glamor Frock Has Odd History

It's a graceful and comfortable design, this "holoku," and you can recognize the Mother Hubbard lines from which it is descended. The zealous missionaries, who introduced the voluminous Hubbards to make Polynesian females modestly conscious, probably would roll over in their island graves if they knew that glamor gals are going to wear "holokus" in Hollywood nightspots.

If you have one made, keep its traditional lines or you'll spoil the effect. Miss Davis still is chuckling at the dumb crack made by a notoriously catty Movietown matron, who was sourly eyeing the star at the premier.

"You look charming, dear," she said, "but that's THE funniest holoku I ever saw." "Why, I had it copied exactly from one I brought back from apartments on 13 East Third street.

Clifford Byers of Helena is the guest of friends and relatives in the city.

Mrs. Lamar Cox was a Friday visitor in Fulton, the guest of friends and relatives.

Mrs. E. J. Baker has gone to El Paso, Texas, where she will visit relatives for several months.

About Rainbows

Rainbows appear in a multitude of forms. They vary in width, and in number and order of colors. A sheet of water, as well as a sun which is reflected by such a surface may give us a primary and secondary reflected rainbow in the sky, intersecting the real rainbow.

Bill Knapp, Who Piloted Exterminator, Says Challedon Is the Greatest Since Old Bones; He Rode Upset When Man o'War Was Beaten

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Service Sports Editor

Bill Knapp says Challedon is the best running horse since Exterminator.

"Big Bill" Knapp has ridden and seen a lot of thoroughbreds. He was one of the truly great American riders. He rode when Man o'War met his only defeat as a 2-year-old in the Sanford Memorial at Saratoga. He watched Seabiscuit in all his classic performances . . . has kept track of Challedon's every step.

"Seabiscuit's stock in trade was a long sustained run," says Knapp. "Recall how he fought them off in his last race, the $100,000 Santa Anita of last winter. He stopped one after another.

Challedon gives you one run . . . from the three-eighths pole home. He picks up momentum . . . is irresistible when he gets rolling in the stretch . . . runs over horses.

"Exterminator had two runs . . . one at the half mile, the other in the stretch, where the racing begins. A run for him and a run for you. You had to let him do it himself. He could lay up closer than Challedon.

"Man o'War tore their heart out with speed in the first furlong. He left the barrier like a hurricane. John P. Grier was the only horse to seriously challenge him in the stretch."

"Would Seabiscuit have beaten Challedon?"

"Not the Challedon which set a track record in the Hollywood Gold Cup," asserts Knapp.

How about Challedon and Exterminator?

"Wait until Challedon is five or six years old, then I'll tell you," replies the old jockey.

That puts the odds in Challedon's favor, for when permitted to race those, from the line of Challenger it improve as they go along.

And it is Bill Brann's intention to let Challedon run out his string.

Down through the paths of time men have argued about the merits of gallopers. They debated when Man o'War and Exterminator were in full sway.

The late Willis Sharpe Kilmer covered a meeting of Old Bones and Big Red.

Samuel D. Riddle ducked the issue . . . finally flatly refused to let Man o'War tackle Exterminator . . . hastily retired the big son of Fair Play, left racegoers at sea in an open boat.

Political paradox is that of the Democrats, who bolt their party to make it hang together that much looser.

Abandon all hope for gentls like the one who spends these hot days worrying about the snow he'll have to shovel off his walk next winter.

After putting his horse through jumps, Il Duce asks, "Am I sick? Am I tired?" The rest of the stanza probably goes, "Oh, I am OK, you're fired."

A Pittsburgh man seems to have put the wrong interpretation on the duty of a husband to provide his wife with bed and board. He is in court for beating his spouse with a plank.

Governor O'Daniel, who has been renominated, apparently does not know that it is bad manners to ask for a second helping of biscuits.

ASSESSMENTS OF UTILITIES SHOW GAIN

A net increase of $1,244,640 in the tax valuation of six major distributors of electricity since 1937 was revealed by records of the Arkansas Corporation Commission yesterday.

The state Utilities Commission said rates of the same companies had been reduced $983,283.00 a year during that time.

Here is an example of state government returning benefits to public agencies and to utility consumers simultaneously. . . . Substantial increases in utilities assessments mean increased revenues for public schools, counties, cities, educational and eleemosynary institutions. . . . Reduced utility rates mean money saved or increased consumption for utility consumers. . . . And remember the figures above are for only a few of the utility companies in Arkansas.

Both Parties Bank On Other's Bolters

Demo and GOP Politicians Insist Time Is Ripe

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — Political notes for today: I spent hours on separate occasions recently talking to two men high in the ranks of the two major parties and, if I have it right, both the Democrats and Republicans are counting on splits within the opposition to win victory.

There's nothing new, amazing about a party's efforts to split the opposition. The thumb-rule of battle, "divide and conquer," is as hoary in politics as it is in war.

What is amazing is that this year ranking politicians in BOTH parties insist that the time was never ripe for applying the split-and-win technique.

Hearts Aren't In It

Said the Democrat: The coolness of the "Old Guard" Republicans, manifested toward Wendell L. Willkie at Philadelphia, has persisted. Many conservative Republicans, outside of the Wall Street crowd, are more lukewarm to Willkie now than when he steamrolled over the convention floor. They may not bolt outright, but they can't put their hearts in electing a man whose ideas are so close to those of the New Deal and without the staunch fighting hearts of the "Old Guard," the G. O. P. is whipped. Willkie split the Republican party in Philadelphia and it isn't politically possible for him to back up enough now to bring them in line. Without these leaders to guide them in the way they should go, there will be more Republicans voting for Roosevelt this year than ever before.

Said the Republican: Why just look at the parade of bolters already — Senators Burke and "Cotton Ed" Smith; George White, a former Democratic national committee chairman; Lewis Douglas, John Hanes and former Senator James Reed and that's just the beginning. Roosevelt split the Democratic party by his decision to run for a third term and by the high-handed methods of his managers at Chicago. For every one of these men of prominence, there are hundreds of thousands in the rank-and-file who feel the same way and are swinging over. There'll be more Democrats in the ranks of Republican voters in November than at any time in the history of the party.

Says I: These two men are astute politicians; just suppose they are BOTH right. Where's the vote in November then? Right back where it started, with the balance of power not with bolters at all but with the 10 or 12 million floaters who have nothing to bolt from because they steer clear of party affiliations.

SERIAL STORY SUMMER THEATER

BY MILDRED WILLIAMS

COPYRIGHT, 1940,
NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: Johnny searched the dressing room. And money but he came. Anger, he confronted Molly, accused her of trading the cameo for a contract. She admitted it, but offered to pay Jean. Love dies for Johnny, as he rushes back to Jean. He meets Masters coming from the Meltons' watches him go to Molly's house.

CHAPTER XII

WHAT had Andre Masters told Jean Reynolds about the cameo? Had he told her that Molly had given it to him in exchange for a theatrical contract? Had Jean informed him the cameo wasn't Molly's to give?

Johnny watched Masters turn into Cottage Street, the questions tumbling through his mind. He dashed up the steps at the Meltons', two at a time.

"Jean . . . Jean, where are you?" he called.

"I'm on the terrace, Johnny. Come out and have some iced tea. Sue just made some."

"What was Andre Masters doing here?" Johnny asked.

"He came to say he was sorry about the fire, and my burns. All very suave and social." She was watching Johnny through her lowered lids.

"What did he say about the cameo?"

Jean laughed softly. "He didn't tell me. He just showed me my own cameo, and said, 'Look what I just bought from Miss Travers.'"

Johnny put his glass firmly on the table. "I hope you snatched the thing out of his hand, and told him Miss Travers hadn't any right to sell it. That cameo still belongs to you."

"You can get more het up about that brooch than you can about Molly," Jean told him. "What's on your mind now? I don't care what Molly does with the darn thing. I hope she got enough out of Masters to set you two up to housekeeping."

"Oh, Jean what a fool I've been. What an utter fool." He dropped to his knees beside her.

Jean stroked Johnny's hair. "Don't say that, Johnny. What happened? Now that Molly has her contract, is the marriage all off?"

JOHNNY looked down the slope of lawn toward the creek. He thought how pleasant everything was here, just as the Cape should be. A haven where one was safe from hatred and greed and malice. He thought of Jean, going back and forth through the flames rescuing the properties she'd borrowed. He thought of their friends who had lent those properties, without hesitancy.

And then his mind went back to Molly, planning her life so cleverly with tricks; denying her real emotions, ignoring the voice of conscience until her sense of values was hopelessly confused. Molly and Jean.

"I don't know what to make of you, Johnny," Jean was saying. "I ask you a question and you just stare off into space."

And Johnny told her. He didn't leave out anything, and Jean listened with a serene little smile.

"Come along now. You and I have work to do. We're going to find Masters and get your cameo tonight."

THEY walked down Cottage Street.

"He's at Molly's. I saw him go that way."

"Oh, Johnny, please don't make me go in. You know how I hate a row. If you must do this horrible thing, don't drag me into it."

"We're both going. I'm intending to show Molly there's a limit to what she can do and get away with."

Carter Earl came to the door. "Hello, there, you two," he said. "I've been wanting to thank you for everything you did last night. Come on in. Miss Travers was just saying she hadn't seen you since the fire . . ."

"We didn't come to be polite," Johnny said. "Mr. Earl, this concerns Miss Travers and Mr. Masters. You can do whatever you like about staying."

"Oh, Johnny, you don't mean. . . Not now. . . Please!" Molly's hand was on his arm.

"If it's about the Theater, I'll stay."

Johnny pushed Molly aside and went over to Andre Masters.

"May I see the cameo you bought from Miss Travers. I'm interested in old jewelry."

Masters frowned slightly. He reached in his vest and handed Johnny the pin. It was the Reynolds cameo, all right.

"Jean, is this your cameo?" he asked, "the one you lent Miss Travers for her part in the play?"

Jean looked at Molly, then at Johnny. "Johnny," she whispered, "let's not, please."

"Molly," he said sternly, "is this the cameo you borrowed from Jean?"

"Oh, what's the use," she said, desperately. "It's Jean's cameo, and all of you know it. You know it yourself, don't you, Andre? In spite of this exquisite pretense. I hadn't any right to sell it. But I wanted that contract so terribly. I didn't realize what I was doing."

Carter Earl was coming to life. He stopped twirling his watch chain. "What contract?" he demanded.

"Andre and I went over to Denais this morning," Molly explained, tearfully. "He got Babbitt to give me a try-out for the new fall show. I got the contract for the part. But what good will a contract do me—in jail?"

"So that's it, Masters," Carter Earl was almost shouting. "What a low trick to play on the girl. That contract was settled when Babbitt saw Molly opening night. You were there when we discussed the matter. My dear," he said to Molly, "I was waiting until the show was over to tell you. Good luck and an offer like that so often upsets a novice."

Molly jumped from the sofa. Her eyes blazed. She came toward Andre Masters with her long fingers outstretched like claws. He covered and backed toward the door. Then Molly's arms dropped limply.

"What a complete idiot I've been," she said hopelessly. "I'm sorry, Jean. Take your cameo. I didn't get any money from Andre Masters. It was a gentleman's agreement, he said. I'm guilty of any charge you want to make against me."

"Don't be foolish," Jean said. "I'm not going to make any charge. Good night everybody, and thanks for my cameo."

JEAN was too good for all of them. Johnny was proud of her. She was so splendid and fine that dishonesty never occurred to her. He ran after her and caught her arm as she started down the steps.

"Jean," he said, "can you forgive me for being such a fool? I realize now you were right. What I felt for Molly wasn't love. What I feel for you is. Do you think you could ever care about me again?"

"Don't apologize, Johnny. I told you love wasn't something I turned on and off like a water faucet. Love with me comes in like the tide, and when the tide goes out I go along with it. I'd have gone on loving you, my darling, till I got to be an old maid like Miss Bessie Carstairs."

In the east the moon was rising. It lighted up the horizon like a spotlight, revealing turrets of clouds. Then suddenly a gray wave of a fog dropped over it, like a curtain. The play was ended. Jean read his thoughts.

"Look, Johnny," she said, pointing toward the sky. "It's exactly like a stage at the Summer Theater. It's over, but you and I have just begun."

"Yes," said Johnny and kissed her.

telling you how I am going to vote."

Mrs. Bodenhamer
EL DORADO — Rumors were current here Friday that Senator Hattie W. Caraway and Mrs. O. L. Bodenhamer had "patched up their political differences," and that Mrs. Bodenhamer would issue a statement for release Sunday announcing her support of Homer M. Adkins for governor.

Mrs. Bodenhamer was an applicant for postmaster at El Dorado, but the senate declined to confirm her appointment at the request of Senator Caraway. Now that their differences have been adjusted, it is believed here that another effort will be made to have her appointment confirmed.

Mrs. Bodenhamer told a newspaperman Friday night, who telephoned her to confirm the report, that she never had been "at odds" with Senator Caraway.

Reform Governor

of American politics has come to a close.

The man who broke it is a lean, dark man with haggard eyes—Sam Houston Jones, the reform governor of Louisiana, a political amateur who now has the job of clearing away the accumulated mess piled up by a decade of fantastically dishonest, cynical and brutal misrule.

The job may break him. He is not too robust; cursed with a delicate digestive apparatus, he has to put in 12 hours a day at his desk, and in addition must wrestle with one of the toughest patronage problems that ever beset a governor. The day I went to see him things had got him down, he was stretched out in bed, at home, trying to get the better of an attack of nervous indigestion which had pulled him away from his desk that morning.

"We're in for four years of the hardest work any people ever had," says Governor Jones.

The first task of the new administration has been to wipe out the basis of the dictatorship by repealing the laws which made that condition possible.

"That part of the job has been done."

"Beating these people was an almost impossible job. They had the law on their side. They had unlimited means of getting finances. There was a shake-down on every single thing."

"Take one illustration—the printing of state ballots. That used to cost $116,000; we're getting it done for $60,000, because there isn't any 'kick-back' on it now. Or take orders for highway materials. In the old days 44 per cent of the total price was paid in commissions to various parties, which means that of the money the state was spending only 56 per cent was actually buying the materials."

"When your opposition has unlimited resources of that kind it's hard to buck 'em."

Knocked Out Props of Dictatorship

Jones started in office, as he says, by knocking out the laws on which the dictatorship rested. Chief steps were the following:

1. Wiping out the "legal-kidnaping" law, under which the state police could (and often did) arrest a man, spirit him off to a far part of the state, and hold him without placing any charge. One such prisoner was held a couple of days on a lonely, mosquito-infested island in the gulf, while his lawyer and his family sought frantically to learn what had become of him. New laws put through by Governor Jones compel the state police to lodge any arrested person immediately in the jail of the parish where the arrest took place, with a formal charge placed against him.

2. Tying public records open to public inspection—prohibited under the Long regime.

3. Revising the election laws, providing (among other things) that all polling places must be in public buildings. Under the old regime, they had a way of putting polling places in disreputable shacks in bad neighborhoods, where decent people could easily be intimidated. One pet stunt, for instance, was to surround such a place with a dozen or more alley-burns on election day and instruct the bums to keep up a steady stream of foul talk. Few women bothered to go to the polls under such circumstances.

4. Prohibiting the collection of political contributions from state employees.

5. Freeing grand juries from restrictions which previously made them mere automatons in the hands of a machine-controlled judge or prosecutor.

6. Barring state office-holders from occupying more than one job at a time.

Drafted Model Civil Service

Law

Getting these laws through is only a start. It will take constitutional amendments to establish the balance of the reform program. These amendments come up for a vote this fall.

Civil service reform is prominent on this program. Immediately after his election, Governor Jones had drafted a model law, based on extensive study of the best laws in other states.

"This law is unique in one respect," he says. "The civil service commission will be appointed by the governor from a list of names recommended by the heads of five designated colleges and universities in the state. It will select, on a strict merit basis, all non-policy-making state employees. The bill was drawn up by Charles E. Dunbar, a member of the National Civil Service Association for many years."

Also pending is an extensive governmental reorganization bill, which will regroup 188 bureaus, departments and agencies into 20. This will not only save money and reduce the number of employees, as Governor Jones says, it will "enable us to know what it's all about down here."

Huey Long made every one of the innumerable bureau heads responsible to the governor alone, which in practice meant that only the governor was in a position to know what was going on.

"If I spent only one week studying each one," says Governor Jones, "it'd take me three and a half years to finish the job of finding out how the government of the state is being run."

Must Cut Corners on Finances

Financial reform is one of the administration's biggest problems.

"We've adopted a new fiscal code which, in my opinion, is the most forward step we've yet taken," says the governor. "A new department, the department of finance, will control all expenditures. Appropriations will not be handed out as in the past. The legislature used to vote a department so much and let it spend the money as it saw fit; now the department can spend only so much as it can prove to the finance department is necessary. At the end of the year, all money unexpended must be turned back to the treasury."

"We're going to have to cut the corners pretty closely on finances, but I don't anticipate any general tax increase. We've eliminated the salaries tax and reduced the auto license tax to a flat $3; in the main, we've tried to shift the burden from the little man to the big man."

"Our additional revenue is coming from state income taxes in the higher brackets, and from increases in the severance tax on oil and the processing tax on natural gas. The only exception is in the tax on cigars and cigarettes; we've put in an increase there for the benefit of the

Flooded City Is to Be Exacuated

10,000 Stricken People to Be Moved From Crowley

NEW ORLEANS—(P)—The coast guard announced that the Red Cross was making efforts to evacuate the entire population of Crowley, a strike belt city of 10,000, that was stricken by rain floods.

Evacuation appeared necessary because of acute sanitary conditions, food famine, and that bread and milk is the only food available.

Turnabout

BLITHEVILLE, Ark.—(P)—G. M. Whistle got mad at his cow, gave her a swift kick. The cow reciprocated. Whistle went to the hospital with a broken leg.

Playing It Safe

Jones: "My new stenographer 'put one over on me yesterday.'"

Smith: "How?"

Jones: "I wanted to ask her to lunch so I spoke the request to the Edison."

Smith: "Well?"

Jones: "Then she typed it and brought it to me for signature."

Schools.

The state's financial condition is none too good. Its bonded debt went up from $9,000,000, are Long, to upward of $160,000,000 with $20,000,000 of floating debt on top of that. During the last two years, deficits have been run up, to be met by borrowing.

Much of this is due to plain thievery. The new administration is preparing now to find out just who stole what, and what can be done about it.

CANDIDATE FOR COUNTY TREASURER

—Paid Political Adv.

To the Voters of Nevada County:-

Thanks for your support four years ago. With three opponents in the race I only lost three city boxes in the county. Due to unavoidable circumstances, it has been necessary for me to devote most of my time to the office. However, you remember that eight years ago, I made a house to house canvass on horseback. Four years ago I canvassed again.

Due to false reports in regard to indefinite camp, I thought it best to obtain my honorable discharge from the Arkansas National Guard, after 16 years service.

I was and am in favor of the Speaking dates.

First, I thought the General Public Expected them.

Second, I knew I could not visit every home in the County.

I promise if elected to enforce the law, collect the taxes without fear or favor, and have the help of capable and efficient deputies.

So why not follow the voters unbroken Custom and elect me your next Sheriff and Collector for Nevada County. You know my record. Am I entitled to this promotion?

Your friend,
